Excerpt: . . . of the important accommodation of the ship, both for officers and men, entirely unprotected, and involves getting the protection to ends of the central box, and the base of turrets by athwartship bulkheads only 4J inches thick, which, though to a certain extent (a width of 31 feet out of 56 feet forward, and 28 feet out of 56 feet aft, or rather less than half its width covered by plating of the bow and stern batteries, are very open to an oblique attack, say, from 20 degrees to 80 degrees on each side before and abaft the beam. The mean of these ranges, 50 degrees, being about the most effective one for the ships own turret guns, and therefore the one on which she would, if possible, engage an enemy, especially a broadside ship. So far as defence from plunging fire is concerned,...

Reviews

It is fantastic and great. It is written in easy words and phrases instead of confusing. I am just delighted to explain how this is actually the best book I have got read through during my individual life and might be the finest publication for ever.

A must buy book if you need to add benefit. This is for anyone who states that there had not been a well worth reading through. It has been designed in an exceptionally straightforward way which is simply right after I finished reading this book where it basically changed me, change the way I think.
