The philanthropist and the statesman regard it as an important factor in their schemes for the well-being of the people. The man of energy recognises in it the opening of new and wider fields for his enterprise, and to anyone who aspires to the possession of an independent home, whether as the reward of his industry or at the cost of a moderate outlay of capital, it affords the means whereby he can gratify his ambition. For generations there has been an unceasing annual outflow of population from the British Isles, and those who were left behind have thereby enjoyed freer scope for the pursuit of material comfort and social progress, for it has mitigated the pressure of the ever swelling numbers who are crowding each other in the battle of life, and to that extent it has moderated the...
